POLITICS IN CHINA

There Is Much Corruption Among High Officials.

Scandals That Approach Very Close to the Doors of the Imperial Palace-Office Obtained Through Bribery.

The corruption in Chinese public life is so general that it has ceased to excite any comment among those who are familiar with the workings of that bureaucratic system, so perfect in theory, so lamentably deficient in practice. It is generally believed by foreigners, however, that the emperor and the highest officials, like the viceroy, Li Hung Chang, are not to be included among the class of corrupt biliceholders; but a recent incident serves to show that the young emperor has not escaped this defilement that taints all parts of the Chinese public 630 AM 640 AM service. This incident, says a Shanghai letter in the New York Tribune, i the appointment of a new taotai of 105 PM 515 PM 500 PH Shanghai. For months there have been rumors of a change in this im-1210 PM 655 AM portant official place, but no one knew exactly the facts. Recently the Peking Gazette came out with the notice that January 11 last "Lu Peh-Yang is appointed taotai of the Soo-Sung Tai eircuit." It may be necessary to state that though this gazette appeared a few days ago, it really represented the official acts of the emperor and the heads of the different boards for Janunry 11. There are no reporters in China eager to send out appointments of ozone they would become old men by telegraph the day they are made. Three or four months is the usual time lamorth dully 53 a m 535 a m 5 55 a m 5 5 a m 5 5 a m 5 5 a m 5 5 a m 5 5 a m 5 5 a m 5 5 a m 1 45 a m 5 2 cast bound dully 103 pm 035 consumed in getting any official action before the public in the pages of the court organ. The circuit mentioned includes Shanghai, which, by reason of the large foreign settlement and the great seep. m. increase of foreign trade, has become a 1860 m, very important place. Usually such an office is filled from a number of minor officials who are designated as "expectant taotais." Those who know the "pull" of each candidate can determine pretty accurately who will be the lucky one to win a coveted office. But in this case all the calculations of experts were upset by the naming of a man who was not only not included among the expectant officials, but who was unknown to any mandarins. The Gazette throws no light on the secret of this outsider's appointment, but diplomatic gossip declares that he secured the place by bribing one of the emperor's favorite cunuchs.

One may imagine the rage of the old Viceroy Liu, of Nanking, in whose province Shanghai is located, when he heard that the man he had recommended had been "turned down" to make way for the protege of a palace eunuch. But Liu is a diplomat to his finger tips. He received the new taotai with great ceremony, and suggested in his courtliest way that the post was one which required great experience, because of the necessity of constant association with foreigners. The proper thing for the new official to have done was to reply that he was sensible of this, and, Florant replicits clust rare on all trains, and reliming resource from Wightte in Kuthers Sity and reason without change on which trains. Thereis said and basesing checked florence to all points acts, worth, east and west, and stemmship lickeds and to all florences points at others rares. Life therefore, relied on the viceroy to aid him, and also to suggest an experienced deputy. Instead of this polite reply, the new taotal answered that he was aware of the difficulties, but he fancied he could meet and overcome them without asking anyone's aid. The old viceroy would have enjoyed ordering the upstart to receive a hundred blows of the bamboo, but he dared make no manifestation of anger.

Some light on the corrupt purchase of official posts is shown by a case in the same issue of the Peking Gaze which records the appointment of the Shanghal taotai. It records the investigation by an imperial censor of the tal income of the 381 societies showed, charge of securing the place of literary special examiner by a metropolitan official. Curiously enough he adopted precisely the same method as that of the taotai-that is, he bribed a palace eunuch. The latter agreed to use his influence as well as that of several of his companions, but he stipulated that | in 1892 absorbed $1,900,000 more than notes must be given for certain amounts to each, and that these notes must be For groceries and meats go to H. Beef Preserved and Kept Pure by a Per-

A writer in a Minneapolis newspaper relates with great circumstantiality how a party of diners in a hotel were surprised and just a little horrified to learn that the roast beef they had eaten was twenty-one days old, and had been lying exposed to the sun for that length of time. They were reassured when they were informed that the meat had been subjected to a permeation of ozone, and by this means "preserved as well as purified." The diners will probably learn before they gain the information from this column, says the New York Mail and Express, that they encountered something entirely new in chemical action, and if any one of them has courage to try it he can very readily prove the assertion. Ozone is one of the principles of oxygen. Prof. Loew says it is one of the greatest oxidyzers known, or, as he once expressed it, "a sublimation of that portion of our atmosphere which supports life, and at the same time helps burn us up." Julius Edmund Doetsch, who died about ten years ago, claimed to have been the inventor of an ozone-produc ing apparatus which would "age" any dead or living thing brought in contact with it. He took two gallons of raw spirits fresh from a still and by running a current of pure ozone through it caused the liquor to taste and smell precisely the same as the very same quality of liquor with an actual age of ten years. Dr. Dootsch believed that if living animals lived in an atmosphere and women at the age of ten and twelve years. He proved that to treat animal meat with the pure gas would have the same effect on them as though they had been exposed to the atmosphere we now breathe for as many days as there were half minutes in the artifi-

w and Doetsch are authorities on chemistry. The western writer may be or he may not. At all events he evidently knows more about eating a dinner than he does about "ozone." He or one of his friends can try the effect of it by shutting himself up in a small room and breathing the pure gas for twenty minutes. If the Doetsch theory is correct, a little wrinkled old man, bald headed and decrepit, will come out to announce in piping treble that he has aged forty years in twenty min-

TRADE UNIONS IN ENGLAND. Over a Million Members in 599 Bodies Their Incomes and Expenditures.

One of the leading features of a recent issue of the Labor Gazette of London is a brief summary of the statistics of trade unions for the year 1892, given pending the issue of fuller details in the report of the chief labor correspondent, now in the press. The reports of 599 separate unions have been dealt with, 432 of which are registered and 117 not registered, while 105 have branches numbering in all 7,308, maleing up an aggregate of 1,237,367 members. The total income of these societies dealt with was about $5,900,000 and the expenditures about $75,000 less; 298 societies, with a membership of 745,648, paid unemployed benefit to the amount of nearly $2,000,000; 308 societies, with 1,103,641 members, paid in dispute benefit $3,300,000; 193 unions, with 585,389 members, paid in sick allowances over $1,000,000, and 88 unions paid as accident benefit to disabled members $89,000. For the purpose of comparing 1892 with the previous year only 381 unions are available, that being the number supplying returns for both years. The increase of memberunions during 189 was 32,161, or a little over 3 per cent. upon the membership of 1891. The tohowever, an increase of 21.5 per cent. There was also a very considerable rise in expenditure, amounting, in fact, to nearly 44 per cent, upon the outlay of 1891. The chief share of this increase was due to heavy demand upon the unin 1891.

Particulars are also given with regard to cooperating farming in Engand and Scotland in 1891 and 1892 Forty-seven societies have made returns, showing that a total of 4,002 nores was being farmed in 1893, an increase of 121% over 1892. The capital employed in 1803 was $450,000, an increase of $29,000 over 1802, and the net loss sustained amounted to $2,190, as compared with $3,410 in 1899.

England's State Plate. England's collection of plate for use at state occusions at Windsor eastle is something fabulous in value. Its display surprised even Russia's crown prince himself. It it generally reck oned to be worth about £2,000,000, and it is no unusual thing at a state banquet at the castle to have plate to the value of half a million in the room. There are two state dinner services. one of gold and one of silver. The gold service was purchased by George IV., and will dine 100 persons. The plates alone of this service cost over £13,000. On state occasions there are usually placed on the dining table some very beautiful gold fiagous, cap tured from the Spanish Armada, which are now, of course, of priceless value, while the great silver wine cooler made for George IV., and weighing 7,000 cunces, niways adorns one corner of the apartment. As sidaboard ornaments there are pretty trides in the way of a peacock of precious stones, valued at 200,000, and a tiger's head from India with a solid laget of gold for its tongue and diamond tecth.

SOMETHING NEW IN CHEMISTRY. ON BEAVER FARMS

A Unique and Thriving Industry of North Dakota.

Animals Obtained from Trapper and Confined in Fonds Where They Multiply Very Rapidly-How They Are Dispatched.

The industry and sagacity of the beaver have often been commented upon. But those qualities have not prevented this animal from being looked upon as a fair object of capture. says the New York Ledger. Its fur is valuable, and, therefore, it is much sought after by trappers. Still, it may surprise some people to know that in one part of this country, at least, there are men who raise beavers for the market, just as they might do corn or cat-It is in McLean county, N. D.; that beaver farming is largely carried on. The soil is very poor and is not adapted, as are other parts of the state, to wheat growing. The Missouri river runs along the western border of the county, and numerous streams flow into it from among the hills to the north and east. Cottonwoods and elm trees grow on the banks of these streams, and it is there where the beaver farms are situated. A man who intends to start this industry purchases, say, ten acres of land through which a stream runs. A dam is built at a point where the stream is narrow and the banks are steep. All that is needed is to fell a few trees across the bed of the stream and fill in with dirt and stones This holds the water back so that two or three acros of land are flooded, thus forming a pond. The next thing to be done is to erect a fence of wire netting from two to three feet high, along the banks of the stream and around the pond, incloding all the trees that can possibly be taken in. Generally a colony of from twelve to sixteen beavers is put on the farm. They are, of course, obtained from trappers. They are placed in the pond in the spring and soon become accustomed to their surroundings. In a few days they begin to build their huts of mud and sticks and to show their wood-chopping abilities on the trees. There is no return from the outlay the first year, but by the fall of the second year the colony has largely increased in number and the farmer looks forward to having a regular income. It is on the last day of October or on the first day of November that the harvest, so to speak, begins. First the ponds are drawn off by means of floodgates that are covered with wire netting to prevent the animals from slipping through. The houses of the beavers are thus left exposed, and the farmer goes from one to the other, tapping on them with a club. Heavers are readily frightened, and the noise causes them to run out. They can only move slowy and are soon caught and dispatched. The beavers which formed the original colony are spared, and then the floodgates are closed and the pond is filled again. The beaver skins are dried. prepared and taken to market, the fur being used in the manufacture of coats and capes and trimming garments for women. A good deal of beaver fur goes to China, where it is made into hoes for women who can afford the

HANDY TO HAVE AN UNCLE. How a Young Man Got Himself Out of a Disagreeable Scrape.

A young man employed at the court house found himself in an embarrassing position the other night, says the Cincinnati Times-Star. He had an engagement to take a couple of young adles to one of the suburban r and in donning his best suit forgot his pocketbook, which peacefully reposed in his every-day clothes. When he boarded a street car and the conductor demanded fare he became painfully aware of his unpleasant situation. He managed to find a dime and a street car ticket in his clothes and this afforded temporary relief. But the young ladies were new acquaintances and he could not well explain the situation and secure a temporary loan. Besides young ladies hardly ever carry pocketbooks for such emergencies. And he in vain looked around for a friend who would accommodate him. When the post office was reached a novel idea struck him. "We'll take another car here," he said. "I promised to mail two important letters for my sister. and she'll never forgive me if I neglect the matter." So they got off the car and the young man dashed into the post office and on to the nearest pawnshop. He carried a gold watch and soon had a loan on it, borrowing a cheaper watch to wear until he redeemed his own timepiece. Then he hurried back, and as the young ladies were patiently waiting he did not tell them about any trouble to get stamps. The young ladies thanked him for a very pleasant evening on their return. but they will not know everything until they read this. The watch was, of course, redeemed the next day.

Sitting as a profession would seem a novelty, but that is the profession followed by a man in Indianapolis. His name is Harry Jennings. He weighs three hundred and sixty pounds and his good nature is in proportion to his superabundance of flesh. So fat is he, says the Indianapolis Sentinel, that walking is almost out of the question, but he manages to go from place to place where he serves at his profession. He has several customers. They are men who conduct offices, but who emy no clerks, and in order to keep their offices open while they go to lunch or other meals, employ Jennings to occupy a chair and attend to bustness which may "drop in" during their absence. One of these offices has a telephone, and Jennings takes a seat at the telephone where he will not have His great pleasure is to sit in a reverse position in a chair with his chin resting on the back. Look north and south, look east and west, at all the strife that sweeps our land. Is protection the cause of it or is it the Wilson free trade bill? The people of our country enjoyed good times so long that when a politician sang they listened to his song of how free trade would help them, how under protection they didn't have a show, how protection didn't protect, and what an awful tax it was upon the people. Now it doesn't take strong arguments at the present time to tell that under protection we were doing very well. is one thing I want to ask any honest man: If you shake protection at old John Bull, don't it make him bellow?
